DESCRIPTION

The first ever commercial vinyl release of the classic folk horror score, presented in an incredible pop-up Witchfinder sleeve. For many, this is the long-awaited score that completes the "holy trinity" of folk horror: The Wicker Man (1973), Blood On Satan's Claw (1971), Witchfinder General (1968). And all these albums were first commercially found and released by Jonny Trunk. This is the first time Witchfinder General has been commercially released on LP (previously only available as a mega rare 1973 library LP or withdrawn CD). As well as the superb Matthew Hopkins/Vincent Price pop-up, the gatefold sleeves feature stills from the classic film, plus comprehensive notes about the film production history and the music. This is just the package the folk horror fans really want. Classic pastoral, melodic and scary music.
